Play-based Blue Door offers kids nurturing family atmosphere

For Jillynn Niemeier, necessity truly was the mother of invention when it came to finding childcare.

Back in 2020, she couldn't find care for her children.

So in August of that year, she started her own childcare, Blue Door Daycare in Monroe.

"One of my friends was also having a hard time finding childcare for her newborn. My husband and my friend encouraged me to get started," Niemeier said. "So I started on the journey to become a licensed family childcare and became licensed in March of 2021."

Blue Door's program is play based and provides a creative, nurturing family atmosphere.

The program "allows children to grow into socially, emotionally, cognitively, and physically-mature people at their own pace, no matter their abilities," Niemeier said. "My goal is to ensure the children have fun and learn from each other."

There's also an emphasis on being outdoors.

"We spend a lot of time outside playing in the backyard, going for walks or going to the parks. I try to spend as much time outside as we can," she said. "I encourage the children to play in the mud and to get messy."

It can be tricky to balance everyone's needs and schedules throughout the day. But those challenges aside, having a hand in helping children develop can be very rewarding.

"I love watching the children learn something new. They are so excited to show you what they just did on their own, or with their friends," she said.

Like many of her colleagues in childcare, Niemeier would like to see more recognition for early childhood educators. "My biggest wish for the childcare profession is to get more recognition for what we do," she said. "We also need to be able to earn a decent living to have a good life with our families."

Elevating childcare as a profession is a matter of sustainability for local communities.

"If there is no one to care for all the children in our lives, there is not going to be businesses or communities.

"If there is no childcare, then families will have to start making sacrifices to make it all work," Niemeier said.

"In the end, the children will be the ones losing out on opportunities."

Editor's note: This is the 11th in a series of profiles on Green County-based child care programs penned by the Green County Development Corporation.

SSM Health Monroe Hospital now Level III Trauma Center

The American College of Surgeons (ACS) has officially verified SSM Health Monroe Hospital as a Level III Trauma Center.

This achievement is the culmination of dedicated work by multiple teams to improve best practices leading to better patient outcomes in providing this level of critical care to local rural communities.

SSM Health Monroe Hospital is one of 41 hospitals in Wisconsin with Level III Trauma Certification.

“Being certified as a Level III Trauma Center will allow more individuals to stay local in an emergency, which is a tremendous benefit to our communities that can be utilized whether you are an SSM Health patient or not,” Mary Tessoroff, EMS Coordinator at SSM Health Monroe Hospital, stated in a press release.

Level III Trauma Center hospitals provide assessment, resuscitation, stabilization and emergency surgery and arranges transfer to a Level I or II facility for definitive surgical and intensive care as necessary.

They must have 24-hour coverage by emergency medicine providers, general surgeon is available to respond to the hospital within 30 minutes and provide care to injured people within capabilities and resources in order to stabilize and transfer to another facility.

This is in addition to having agreements with other hospitals for transferring trauma patients and providing education and training to pre-hospital partners.

There are five separate categories of trauma verification that hospitals can achieve, and it is a lengthy process.

For SSM Health Monroe Hospital, this process began in January 2020 with thorough reporting during which the hospital needed to provide it had the resources and staff to care for patients in with serious injuries.

That reporting period concluded with a successful survey in September 2021.

“Just striving for this level improved the quality of care for our patients, let alone receiving this distinction, speaks volumes to the dedication and collaboration of our teams,” said Jane Curran-Meuli, President of SSM Health Monroe Hospital and Monroe Clinic Medical Group. “I want to thank our extraordinary staff for all of their efforts to find new ways to provide exceptional care.”

SSM Health Monroe has recently been certified as a Level III Trauma Center, providing the area with a higher level of critical care.
